BAN BATHING IN MARSH CREEK DURING DROUGHT

State Health Board Warns Ruling Is Necessary For Health.

WATER SUPPLY ENTIRELY PURE

Warning was issued today by the Pennsylvania state health department against swimming and bathing in Marsh Creek.

I. M. Glace, district engineer, is in Gettysburg representing the state health department in the matter of opening additional wells to augment the normal supply of water from Marsh Creek. He strenuously urged that swimmers and bathers abide by the order of the department and discontinue the use of Marsh Creek particularly in view of the low condition of the stream.

"This is of utmost importance," said Mr. Glace. "Bathing in the supply stream is not good at any time and should not be done. With the stream at such a low level as at present it becomes necessary in the interest of public health to bar absolutely all bathing and swimming in that creek."

Bathers Refrain
Mr. Glace conferred with local health authorities and with the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce all of whom assured him that swimming and bathing enthusiasts would cooperate with the health department and forsake the use of Marsh Creek in favor of other swimming places in the interests of public health.

Mr. Glace has been spending practically all of his time during the past week between Hanover and Gettysburg safeguarding against the use of any contaminated water or any practices that pollute any supply streams. Tests are being made of all waters from wells that are being pressed into service to augment the normal water supply.

Depend on Purity
"Gettysburg can depend on the purity of the borough water," he stated.

The water being pumped into the mains from the wells is being treated right at the wells and every test shows it to be perfectly safe. "If the public will cooperate in the health department's order regarding swimming and bathing in Marsh Creek—which now is a matter of paramount importance to the continued safety of public health—there is nothing to fear at the present time."

Continued tests will be made to assure the perfect purity of the water supply.

Property owners along Marsh Creek have been asked to cooperate in the enforcement of the health department ban on swimming and bathing in Marsh Creek.

SISTER WRITES SQUAW BALLAD

Mary Jamison Recalled By Booklet Issued By Father Whalen.

Copies of an attractive booklet entitled "Ballad of The Golden Squaw," by Sister M. Fides Glass, of Pittsburgh, based on the legend of Mary Jamison, who was taken from her home in the South Mountains to New York state by Indians, have been received here from the Rev. Father W. W. Whalen, pastor of St. Ignatius Catholic church, Buchanan Valley.

The ballad condenses the tragedy of the ill-fated white squaw in a charming simplicity rarely found in the literature of today, according to persons who have read the work.

Three fine drawings show Mary Jamison in her bridal dress, as a young Indian maiden and as an old woman. Other pictures, all drawn by the author, also appear in the booklet.

The text is all handwork, with monastic scrollings and decorations. Plates were made from the original for printing. In many ways the booklet is unique and unusual.

Seven Drivers Caught in Speed Trap at Cashtown in One Day

Seven motorists were arrested during the operation of a speed trap by patrolmen of the local sub-station of the state highway motor patrol at Cashtown, Friday afternoon and evening.

Warning was given through newspapers here and in Chambersburg earlier in the week that a speed trap would be operated at Cashtown on Friday, and consequently, none of the alleged violators were local residents, most of them being from other states and other sections of this state.

Four motor patrolmen under the direction of Sergeant T. N. Boate, Gettysburg, operated the speed trap at the foot of Cashtown hill over a measured eighth mile. A limit of

211 MILLIONS SPENT TO GIVE KIDDIES SCHOOL

Annual Expense In State 9 Millions Higher During Past Year.

$90.41 IS COST FOR EACH PUPIL

Reports compiled by the department of public instruction show that $211,789,815 was spent by local school districts during the year in support of the public schools. This amount represents an approximate increase of $9,000,000 over the previous year, and is considered a normal increase.

As a result, 1,297,123 boys and girls were given the advantages of a common school education, including 395,020 in the high school. All of this money was raised locally with the exception of $24,987,283 or 11.3 per cent of the total, which was contributed by the commonwealth.

The average rate of school tax required to raise the school fund was 18 mills, a slight decrease from that of the preceding year.

An analysis of the major items entering into the full amount of $211,789,815 shows eight definite types of expense, as follows:

Eight Divisions
First, expenses of general control, commonly known as overhead, such as salaries of secretaries and treasurers of school boards, fees of tax collectors, legal service, salaries of superintendents, enforcement of attendance laws and other minor expenses, amounted to a total of $7,925,705.

Second, expenses of instruction required the sum of $108,105,661. This item calls for more than one-half of the whole cost of operating the schools. It includes costs of teachers' salaries, textbooks, supplies, tuition and attendance at teachers' institutes.

Third, expenses of operation including cost of janitorial service, fuel, light, water and power, added another $13,474,332.

Fourth, to keep the buildings grounds and equipment in a proper state of repair required the sum of $5,368,563.

Auxiliary Expenses
Fifth, a series of expenses for auxiliary agencies which covered such activities as support of libraries, medical, dental and nursing service, transportation of pupils, lectures, etc., cost a total of $5,335,292.

Sixth, expenses of fixed charges, or those covering such items as contributions to the state school employees association, rent, insurance and taxes amounted to $5,184,226.

Seventh, cost of debt service amounted to $31,816,145. This is one of the heaviest items. It covers the amount of money appropriated to redeem outstanding bonds issued to pay for new building projects, the liquidation of temporary notes, interest due and payments into a sinking fund.

Cost $90.41 Each
Eighth, all expenses associated with extensions to school property in the form of new grounds, new buildings and equipment, and the alteration of old buildings required the sum of $34,579,891.

Ordinarily, the first six items of expense are termed current expenses. They include the general operating expenses of the school system from year to year and are generally used as the basis to compute comparative school costs. When thus used in connection with the number of pupils in average daily attendance, the average cost per pupil in attendance in the public schools is found. On the basis of the latest figures available, this cost was $90.41 per pupil.

Test Springs For Littlestown Supply

Two additional springs have been prepared at Littlestown in case of emergency in the water supply of that place. These springs have been tested and were proved satisfactory.

The supply of water at Cashtown, health department engineers reported, shows signs of failing as the springs which are the source of supply are getting low. Measures to conserve use of water have been applied.

At Biglerville wells and a spring are keeping the supply of water as great as the demand with care exercised in use of the use of the water.

The health engineers report that throughout York and Adams counties the communities which are using ground water from wells have not had water shortage, but the towns relying on springs, creeks and other surface sources are having trouble because the surface supplies are becoming mere trickles.

TRACE OF RAIN FALLS FRIDAY

Temperatures Start On Week-End Climb As Wave Continues.

A trace of rain fell in Gettysburg Friday night but the amount was so slight that it could not be measured. Dr. Henry Stewart, Baltimore street, said today.

It had the effect of temporarily cooling things off but today the temperature was rapidly bound again for the higher regions which have been the order of the day for the past three week-ends and the prospects of another sweltering Sunday were too good for comfort.

First Since July 16
The trace Friday night was the first to fall in Gettysburg and vicinity since July 16 when a trace also fell. The last time any measurable rain fell here was on July 12 and 13 when .07 inches fell while on July 7, another .07 inches had fallen. The last rain in Gettysburg that was of any benefit to growing things was 1.34 inches of rain on July 2, thirty-eight days ago.

Since that time green pastures have turned to brown expanses in Adams county, and promising fields of corn will probably give farmers nothing but the fodder unless nothing short of a miracle occurs during the next week. The wheat crop was not at all affected and should any moisture have fallen anytime during the month of July, a bumper crop of corn would have been produced by the warm nights.

Mercury Goes Up
Neighboring sections reported more than a trace, but not enough to materially aid the parching crops in this vicinity. The barometer showed no signs of more rain.

The temperature at 2 o'clock Friday was 100 and at 2 o'clock today it was 99, a higher humidity percentage making the later temperature even more uncomfortable than the extreme high recordings of last week-end.

Stills Closed Down By Water Shortage

York, Aug. 9 (AP).—The moonshine industry in York county is suffering as a result of the prolonged drought.

Claude Sheffer, Dover township, told state police who raided his farm yesterday that he was forced to shut down his still because of the water shortage. Sheffer's spring was low and water to cool the condensing coil was no longer available.

Two stills were found on Sheffer's farm. They were constructed in a secret room.

GETS $11,958 AS TAX SHARE

County Treasurer Mailed Check For Six Months' Gasoline Tax.

A check of $11,958.19 today was received by R. Blaine Kitzmiller, Adams county treasurer, from the state treasurer, representing the county's share of the tax on gasoline sales in the six-month period ending August 1.

Since August 1, 1929, Adams county's share of the tax collected in this county amounted to $31,119.16, as compared with $21,031.37 in the year beginning August 1, 1928.

Under state law, this money must be used for road and bridge work in the county. With several county-aid road projects under way in Adams county this summer, this money will come in handy. C. F. Palmer, clerk to the county commissioners, said.

The next six months' check from this source is expected to be smaller, however, inasmuch as one cent was tacked on the state's four-cent gasoline tax on July 1.

WOMAN TO GO TO ELECTRIC CHAIR

Irene Schroeder Will Pay Extreme Penalty In Officer's Death.

New Castle, Aug. 9 (AP).—Irene Schroeder and W. Glenn Dague, convicted of the killing of Highway Patrol Corporal Brady Paul, today were sentenced to die in the electric chair.

The pair, who killed the highway officer on the Butler-New Castle road, December 27, were sentenced to die by Judge R. L. Hildebrand, after he refused to grant them new trials.

The date for the execution will be set by the governor. With the passing of sentence, the fate of the former waitress and the man who deserted his wife and children for a career of crime passed from the Lawrence county courts.

They were convicted last spring after a dramatic man-hunt and trial. Since their conviction the man and woman have been prisoners in the jail here.

Drought Entailing Big Expense To Company Supplying Town's Water

Cease Pumping Friday Night After Reservoir Is Filled To Capacity From Four Sources; Johns Well Averages 130 Gallons Of Water A Minute.

WATER COMPANY PAYING $100 A WEEK FOR USE OF WATER FROM BIG WELL

The present drought with the attendant expense imposed upon the Gettysburg Water company in providing an augmented water supply for Gettysburg will cost the company between $20,000 and $25,000, it was said by officials of the public utility today.

Although most of the work in connection with providing emergency sources of water for Gettysburg has now been completed, company officials said additional expense might be entailed if the drought continues and they are forced to look for other sources of supply.

HANOVER RAISES $25,000 FUND

Citizens Subscribe Big Amount To Battle Water Company.

Between forty and fifty per cent of a sum of $25,000 to be raised by the citizens of Hanover and McSherrystown, to augment a like amount to be appropriated by the Hanover council for a fight to gain the water rights held by the Hanover and McSherrystown Water company and place them in the hands of the borough, was subscribed by the 500 people at a mass meeting held in the Hanover opera house Friday night.

The borough of McSherrystown will put its seal of approval on the action already taken by the citizens and borough of Hanover, it was announced by Albert Weaver, burgess of McSherrystown. The meeting for this purpose will be held next Tuesday evening in the engine house of the McSherrystown fire company.

Cremers Speaks
The meeting was called to order by William Mason, secretary of the Hanover Chamber of Commerce. He introduced Councilman Frank E. Cremer, chairman of the Hanover fire and water committee, who was greeted by much cheering and applause.

Mr. Cremer announced the subject of his talk would be, "Hanover; the Waterless Town."

Quoting Dr. Peter Muhlenberg, Mr. Cremer said: "There is a time to pray and a time to fight, and now is the time to fight. Council is unanimous in its opinion as to what shall be done in the water question. To properly fight the case requires more money than council can appropriate, as its finances are limited."

"Money is needed to oppose a gang of thieves and crooks, so that the best available legal talent and most expert engineering advice may be employed. When I say crooks and thieves I think you can use no other term when they take the last nickel from a poor washerwoman."

STOCK REPORT

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—Stocks were heavily liquidated during the first hour of the stock market this morning selling off 1 to 6 points. A nine and a half pound son was born this morning to Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. Blocher, Washington, D. C. Both Mr. Blocher and his wife, whose maiden name was Miss Ruth Klepper, are natives of Gettysburg. Mother and child are reported to be doing nicely.

BURNS TO DEATH

Chambersburg, Aug. 9 (AP).—Miss Elva Nichol, 15, of Cleveland, was fatally burned at the farm home of her cousin, Mrs. Jacob Beltz, at Nysville, near here last night. Her clothing caught fire when she poured kerosene on a wood fire.

WEEK'S WEATHER

Washington, Aug. 9 (AP).—The weather for the week beginning Monday: Showers Tuesday night or Wednesday and again toward end of week. Cooler first half of week with moderate temperatures thereafter.

At 9 o'clock, Friday evening, officials and workmen of the Gettysburg water company breathed a sigh of relief for the first time in ten days.

Reservoir Filled
At the hour, the reservoir was filled to overflowing and pumps at the pumping station, at the Johns well and at the reservoir were ordered shut down for the night.

The pump at the Johns well was placed in operation late Friday afternoon, and pumped for more than an hour directly into the main on Steinwehr avenue. After sediment was pumped from the shaft, the water came in clear and cold, albeit somewhat hard.

With a pump capable of taking 150 gallons of water per minute from the Johns well, the machine was started at a speed of 130 gallons a minute.

Pumping Delayed
After pumping for several hours with this pump this morning, the machine had to be stopped because it was found that a small auxiliary pump, used to force chlorine into the line to purify the water, was of insufficient capacity.

Another chlorine pump was procured and installed, and the big pump was again placed in operation around noon.

Rumors of various kinds as to the compensation given Mr. Johns for the use of his well have prompted water company officials to announce that the owner of the farm on which the well is located is being paid $100 a week until the well is abandoned.

Reports have reached water company officials stating that Mr. Johns was giving the water free of charge and that the water company should not be allowed to charge. Other rumors had the price being paid Mr. Johns as high as $500 a week.

Well Useless
Work of cleaning out two wells in the vicinity of the reservoir, in addition to those already functioning there, was stopped Friday afternoon, when one well showed a flow of approximately four gallons an hour and the pipe was broken in the other so that it was impossible to continue.

Water company officials said the well in which the pipe broke would be repaired at once and a pump installed so that this well, which is estimated to have a flow of between 35 and 40 gallons of water a minute, may be used.

Pumps at the water company's pumping station operated between six and seven hours, Friday, filling the reservoir earlier than expected. The plant was shut down about 9 o'clock, Friday evening, until this morning, thereby giving Marsh Creek an opportunity to replenish itself slightly.

Water company officials said they expected local housewives to perform their weekly laundrying as usual on Monday, but urged that no water be wasted during the process.

Finds Baked Apples On Trees On Tour

State College, Aug. 9 (AP).—Five per cent of the apples in orchards visited are being literally baked on the trees, Dr. G. L. Zundel, plant specialist of the Pennsylvania state college, said today on returning from a trip through Franklin county.

Dr. Zundel brought with him a collection of partially baked apples all from orchards which had given promise of fine crops until the extreme heat arrived.

He reported that apples in the vicinity of Scotland had shown worst effect from the heat and that Smokehouse variety apparently had been susceptible.

MILLION DOLLAR THEFT SOLVED

Chicago Police Holding Three In Gigantic Bond Robbery.

Chicago, Aug. 9 (AP)—The Chicago Daily Times Friday said three members of an alleged $1,000,000 international bond theft ring have been seized in Loop hotels by detectives and that the leader was running into a trap set for him by authorities.

The paper said one of its reporters discovered that the three under arrest had been held incommunicado in a local police station since Saturday and it reported that they are Stanley McCormick, Leo Mergen and R. W. Hampton, alias Bacon, of Indianapolis.

The newspaper quotes Police Captain Dan Gilbert as saying that Mergen, an ex-convict, had $25,000 worth of securities in his possession when seized, all of which were stolen. They included 100 shares of Ohio Public Service company, two bonds of the Michigan Public Service company and an Erie Forge company bond, the paper said. Captain Gilbert said the Ohio bonds, with $20,000 worth still missing, were taken in an inside job from the company's safe in Ohio; the Michigan bonds were stolen from a messenger en route from a suburban bank to a downtown bank recently, and the Erie bond was taken in a hold-up at Memphis last year.

PAYNE WANTS QUICK DEATH

Wife Slayer Would Do It Over Again, He Confesses.

Stinnett, Tex., Aug. 9 (AP)—A. D. Payne, Amarillo lawyer, Friday night was awaiting punishment for the murder of his wife and maiming of his 9-year-old son with a dynamite bomb in the family motorcar June 27, according to sixty-three-page confession, signed and in the hands of authorities.

He pleaded that the punishment, preferably death in the electric chair, be expedited. He had renounced insanity in making his confession.

"No, sir," he said, "I am not insane. I am just abnormal. I knew I was committing murder and am not trying to dodge the penalty now."

Not Sorry

Edwar W. Thomerson, district attorney, said the case probably would be presented to a grand jury August 25.

Payne, detailing a series of plots covering eighteen months to kill his wife so she would not learn he was "the meanest man on earth," said he was "not" sorry for the murder. He said he feared Mrs. Payne would learn of his financial losses and his relations with Verona Thompson, his stenographer.

"If I had it to do over," he said, "I would do the same thing again."

FLOODS ABATE

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 9 (AP)—Rain which has flooded the southwest taking a toll of six lives, continued with lessened force today. Systematic search for additional victims was begun today.

Ex-Congressman Made Big Mistake

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP)—Manuel Herrick, former Oklahoma congressman, in jail here after his arrest while working at a still as handy man at $15 a week, observed Friday that maybe he had made a mistake in not taking some of the money he said was offered him during his one term as a lawmaker. "When I was in Congress," he said, "I had as much as $50,000 in bills stacked on my desk—dishonest money. But I said to them, 'Take it away. Maybe I was a fool.'"

Barefoot, unshaven and clad in overalls, Herrick, 54, would not elaborate on the "dishonest money." He stuck to his story that he took the job at the still to get evidence to be turned over to prohibition officials.

12 GOVERNORS WILL CONFER

Will Be Shortage Of Feed For Livestock In Stricken States.

Washington, Aug. 9 (AP)—President Hoover's study of the critical situation developing in the Central States as a result of the disastrous drought culminated Friday in a call for the governors of the twelve states most seriously affected to meet at the White House next Thursday to form a nation-wide relief organization.

The executives of Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, Virginia, Montana, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska have been invited to attend. In parts of these states, according to the president's statement, the shortage of feed for live stock has become acute enough to threaten serious privation.

The call for the meeting went out late in the afternoon, after the president had received from the secretary of agriculture a preliminary report of the damage occasioned by the unprecedented dry weather and after a discussion of the emergency at a meeting of the cabinet.

President Hoover also discussed the drought with Ernest P. Bicknell, acting head of the American Red Cross, and with Dewitt Smith, Mr. Bicknell's aide.

Red Cross Ready
No immediate action on the part of the Red Cross is contemplated, it is understood, but that organization has been asked to hold itself in readiness.

It was learned that railways in the central area were preparing to file with the Interstate Commerce Commission emergency rates reducing the cost of transporting feed grains. The application for the new rates is expected to go in within a few days.

While admitting, in a statement outlining the problem confronting the country as a result of the drought, that a great deal of privation is in prospect among families in the stricken areas, the president emphasized that there was no danger of a food shortage.

"The bulk of the direct human food production of the country is abundantly in hand," he declared.

BEAR RAMPAGE HITS MARKET

Prices Tumble On Stock Exchange Under New Selling Barrage.

New York, Aug. 9 (AP)—Bulls were left with only a few souvenirs of their latest campaign as the closing gong halted a new bear rampage on the New York Stock and Curb Exchanges Friday.

The somnolent stock market finally tripped and fell headlong. With only two exceptions, the price average of 90 leading shares recorded the sharpest loss since the panicky days of last November. The total sales of 3,312,520 shares for the day could not be considered a large turnover, but it was more than double any day's business in the past week.

Average Tumbles
The average of 90 shares tumbled 6 1-5 points to 161, the lowest level recorded since July 9. It was during that week that one of the leading bull operators returned from abroad, traders began to decide that the convulsions resulting from the drastic deflation of June had ended, and bullish sentiment began to make itself felt in speculative quarters once more.

The level of 161 compares with the low of the year of 154, reached on June 24. Save for June it was the lowest since the levels reached in the selling movement just before Christmas. Friday's final level was 20 4-5 points above the bottom level reached in November, and nearly 45 points below the 1930 peak reached in early April.

EVIDENCE MAY SOLVE MURDERS

Lingle Death And Zuta Slaying Linked By Wisconsin Police.

Chicago, Aug. 9—Evidence discovered by authorities in southern Wisconsin promised Friday night to solve three of Chicago's most notorious murders.

The slaying of Jack Zuta, the killing of Jake Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, and even the famed St. Valentine's Day massacre two years ago, wherein seven men were mowed down by machine guns, all were connected in clues dug up in Waukesha, Milwaukee and surrounding summer resorts.

District Attorney Herman Salen of Waukesha believed he established a link between the Zuta and Lingle slayings when he questioned Tony Scaler, Milwaukee speaker-proprietor, who used to work for Zuta in the notorious Chicago Wigwam Cafe.

Lingle Complaint
"Zuta used to complain to me about Lingle," said Scaler. "He said he couldn't understand why his places were being shoved around by the Chicago police while Al Capone's places were flourishing. He used to ask me what 'rap' the police could have against them."

Scaler's revelations were looked upon as being extremely important in view of Lingle's close friendship with police and with Capone, overlord of all Chicago's underworld activities.

"Developments indicate that many of Zuta's gang sought refuge in the Wisconsin lake region after the Lingle shooting," said Salen. "All evidence points to the theory that Zuta was killed by members of his own gang because he knew too much about the slaying of Lingle."

Clues to Massacre
The clues to the St. Valentine's Day massacre were found in letters taken from Charles (Red) Brennan, former Chicago gangster now in Milwaukee. The letters were written by a Chicago girl who signed herself "Kate Chester." Excerpts from the letters:

"Do you remember the girl up in the flat with Zuta?"
"They made it hot for me about that cop's uniform they found at the massacre, but I didn't tell them a thing."

"I'm sorry you shot yourself in the leg. Be careful of that rod, Red."

The letter telling of the "cop's uniform" was believed to refer to the fact that several of the St. Valentine's Day assassins wore uniforms of the Chicago police force.

BORDER TOWNS HIT BY FLOODS

Four Known Dead In Arizona Disaster On Thursday.

Nogales, Ariz., Aug. 9 (AP)—Flood waters sweeping through the Mexican border towns of Nogales, Sonora and Nogales, Arizona, early Thursday caused four known deaths, with forty persons reported missing. Varying reports of the number of dead were received as Mexican soldiers and bewildered citizens searched the debris of wrecked adobe homes. Salvador Estrada, comandante of Mexican police across the line, said four bodies had been found.

Bodies of two unidentified women were swept to the Arizona side. That of another was taken from a collapsed house.

A hotel, two-story tenement house and twenty other adobe homes collapsed between midnight and dawn as the surging water, five to six feet deep tore through the two towns. Most of the damage, as was the loss of life, was on the Sonora side, where the brunt of the water's onslaught was borne.

More than 100 persons were homeless, while occupants of fifty other houses threatened with collapse were ordered out by the Mexican police.

Bury Wrong Man But Have To Pay

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP)—Nephews and nieces who Thursday believed they had attended the funeral of their uncle came back from the cemetery to find that they had buried a stranger.

They found their uncle alive and well standing at the intersection of two busy streets. Police, to whom they appealed for relief, were only able to change health department records, to show an unidentified man had been buried.

The coroner could do no more and told them there was no way to recover funeral expenses.

Last Monday a man was found dead in Carroll park and Charles Houser identified him as William L. Lewis, an uncle who had lived with him for 15 years. The identification was confirmed by other nephews and nieces.

MARYLANDER MAY USE RAIN POWDER ON TREES

Hagerstown—Samuel Nicodemus, Edgemont apple orchardist, fearing serious damage to his crop by the drought, is investigating the advisability of having rain making powder spread in the sky above his orchards by airplane.

Mr. Nicodemus has 130 acres of fruit trees—most of them apple. He began a study of the situation and said that, if conditions warrant, he will purchase a supply of powder similar to that used for some time with success in arid New Mexico. He would have the powder spread from an airplane on the clouds over his farm in the hope that it will condense them into rain.

DAGGER

By Mary Dahlberg

SYNOPSIS: Dagger Marley, high-spirited young Texas girl, is heart-broken when news comes of the death of Blaine Howard, whom she once rescued from some Mexican insurgents, on the Western Front in France. But soon afterward she meets Captain John Vanneering, American aviator, and marries him just before he returns to the front, where he is killed. After the war he returns, broken by heavy drinking. Then he is killed in an airplane crash and Dagger goes to France to visit Dick Welling, a friend of her ranch days, now an English lord and married to Blaine Howard's widow, Emily. In her hotel room in Paris Dagger finds flowers and a note from the Duc de Pontoise, who knew her husband, and who also, she knew, had been a friend of Howard's. She meets and likes Howard's widow, now Welling's wife, of whom once she had been unreasonably jealous. She decides to invite the Duc de Pontoise to tea.

Chapter 23

THE DUC IS FASCINATED

De Senac was quite different from what she had expected. At his knock Marie sprang forward to open the door.

On the threshold stood a slender, wiry man, holding himself with a dominant energy which suggested untapped strength. The horizon-blue uniform revealed a straight carriage, broad shoulders, tapering to a narrow waist. The head was carved like an eagle's, with the jutting, beaked nose that Dagger liked, dark eyes that glowed brilliantly and a shock of snow-white hair. At first glance, she thought him quite old, but then she saw the firm pinkness of his skin, the boyish erectness of his build, and knew him for middle-aged.

He bowed low over her hand, touching it with his lips—Dagger's initial experience with the gesture. His heels had clicked together, and his body swung gracefully from the hips.

"Charmed, Madame," he said in English practically as fluent as her own. "It is delightful of you to permit me this pleasure."

"But how can I thank you for your thoughtfulness, Monsieur le Duc?" she answered. "Your flowers were a beautiful welcome to a stranger."

He eased himself rather cautiously into the chair she indicated. "This abominable leg," he explained with a smile. "A souvenir of the Chemin des Dames—which might better be called the Road of the Damned. But I owe it one favor, for there I met Madame's husband. Madame will suffer me to relate the experience? I shall not distress her?"

"Oh, no," she reassured him eagerly. "Please tell me."

"There is little to tell. I was struck by a shell fragment in the advance, and left for dead. Indeed, I should have died from loss of blood but for the fact that Captain Vanneering made a forced landing in the same field. Walking from his plane, he came upon me, bound up my wound and summoned stretcher-bearers. I owe him my life, and from that began our friendship. He visited me in the hospital, and afterward spent a leave at my chateau that Tante—my aunt, Madame, who will be happy to make Madame's acquaintance—might thank him. For we are very dear to one another."

Tears stung Dagger's eyelids. De Senac made a gesture of deprecation.

"I have not annoyed Madame?"

"No, no! I am glad to hear. My husband was unwilling to speak of his experiences after the war. He was of those who felt that they had fought in vain."

The Frenchman's lean face lighted compassionately.

"Poor lads! These have been trying years for youth. One must have the tolerance of age to grasp the inwardness of events. What seems futile on the surface often strikes roots deep into the hearts of men—and whatever truly reaches to men's hearts has not been in vain."

Dagger was fascinated. He talked on freely, encouraged by her interest, telling of his belief in the responsibility of those born with exceptional ability and integrity to render unusual service to mankind.

return. He spoke proudly of the ancient lineage of his noble family and its services to France. The talk drifted back to the world war once more.

"You must have had many adventures in those four years, Monsieur le Duc," she prompted.

"Millions shared them with me," he rejoined deprecatingly.

"Ah, but not many served through four years, and fought so valiantly as you. Were you at the Marne?"

"No, I was in the North—in the great holding battle in Lorraine. Our fight was to maintain the line upon which the armies pivoted back before the German rush."

"Oh, do tell me," she begged. "You weren't a General, then?"

"No, a Colonel. I had a regiment of red-legged devils from my own country."

country, Normandy. I daresay there were men under me whose ancestors had followed my ancestors at Crecy and Agincourt."

"How marvelous," cried Dagger. "We have no such memories in my country. My uncle, who is still alive, fought Indians as a young man; a hundred years ago, when my family emigrated to Texas, it was all open range, where the buffalo grazed, except for a dozen or so Mexican settlements."

De Senac was as excited as a schoolboy.

"Quel merveilleux!" he protested. "But Madame is of Texas! How often as a lad I lost myself in the tales of her Indian-fighters, and pistol-shooters. Madame must tell me of it. I reproach myself that I have talked so much."

It was the Duc's turn to be fascinated while Dagger told vividly of life on the Mexican border, and the exploits of her own ancestors in the winning of the West. The tea hour flew as though on wings.

Dagger's third awakening in Paris was still happier than her second. Marie brought her an armful of flowers—"from Monsieur le Duc, Madame." And with them a crested note from de Senac's Tante, the Princess Rakovski, inviting Dagger to tea that afternoon.

Ignorant as she was of European social customs, she was yet impressed by the fact that a woman of such rank, so much older than herself, should have made the initial advance so promptly. And she was doubly grateful for the invitation when the telephone rang, and Dick's voice sounded in her ear.

"We want you to come to tea, dear," he said, after the usual preliminaries.

"I'm so sorry, but I can't, Dick," she answered. "The Duc de Pontoise was here yesterday—he was a friend of Jack's—and his aunt has invited me to tea this afternoon."

Dick whistled so shrilly that she jumped.

"My word! That means business with a Frenchman."

In Monday's chapter Dagger gains entry into the brilliant circles of Parisian high society and meanwhile the Duc's interest in her is increasing.

DEMAND FREEING OF MISSIONARIES

Two Held By Communists For $50,000 Ransom In China.

London, Aug. 9 (AP).—The British government Wednesday made urgent representations to the Nanking government for the release of the missionaries, Miss Edith Nettleton and Miss E. J. Harrington, being held for $50,000 ransom.

It was Miss Nettleton whose finger had been reported cut off and mailed in a letter demanding $50,000.

Minister Lamson, in Peking, told the Chinese government that if the brigand threats of further outrages were carried out, the result would be a deplorable and disastrous reaction of public opinion throughout the world and the Chinese people and government would be disgraced.

The Church Missionary society has given its Puchow representative authority to pay the ransom demanded by the captors of Misses Nettleton and Harrington, if the British consul there considers it necessary to accomplish their release. The amount demanded was $50,000 Chinese or about $19,000 gold.

Divorce Halts Film Star's Wedding Plans

Santa Barbara, Calif., Aug. 9 (AP).—A hitch in the plans of Dolores Del Rio, motion picture actress, to be married to Cedric Gibbons, art director for a moving picture company, at the historic Santa Barbara Mission, developed Wednesday. Father Augustine of the mission announced he could not perform the ceremony without a special dispensation because of the actress' previous marriage and divorce.

Announcements had been made here, in Hollywood and New York that Miss Del Rio and Gibbons would be married by Father Augustine. The couple filed an application for a marriage license here last week but had not called for it early Wednesday afternoon. Advice from Hollywood said they planned to arrive Wednesday by motor shortly before the hour of the wedding.

Miss Del Rio divorced her first husband, the late Jaime Del Rio, a year ago last January. He died while abroad last year.

ONE DAY PICNIC

A one day picnic will be held this year by the Barlow community association on Thursday, August 21.

The event was cut to one day because of the acute water shortage and the fact that buildings on the grounds were damaged by fire recently.

REED DENIED SECOND TERM

Bachelor Nominated To Be Republican Candidate For Governor.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 9 (AP).—Two young ex-soldier bachelors have been nominated by Kansas voters to contest for the governorship in the November election.

In a surprisingly clear-cut victory Frank (Chief) Hauke Tuesday won the Republican nomination for Governor Clyde M. Reed, veteran politician, who was seeking renomination for a second term. Harry H. Woodring was named the Democratic standard bearer over Noah L. Bowman, also a Kansas party leader for several decades.

Reed Denied Renomination
Refusal of the Republican electorate to renominate Governor Reed and the overwhelming nomination of Senator Henry J. Allen were the high lights of the primary.

Election of either Hauke or Woodring would place a young unmarried man in the governor's mansion here, a distinctly unusual situation in Kansas history. Both of the gubernatorial candidates are former commanders of the state American Legion. Hauke, a farmer, is 36 years old. Woodring, a banker, is 41.

HAWKS MAKES QUICK FLIGHT

Lands In Los Angeles After Leaving New York 15 Hours Before.

Los Angeles, Aug. 9 (AP).—Frank Hawks, who began a trans-continental flight from Curtiss field, New York, at 5 a. m. Wednesday, landed at the Municipal airport here at 4:50:43 p. m.

He spent 14 hours 50 minutes 43 seconds en route and stopped five times to refuel his plane—at Columbus, Ohio; St. Louis, Wichita, Albuquerque and Kingman, Arizona. The last 260 miles of the flight was made through storms.

There was no trans-continental speed flight exactly comparable to the one made Wednesday but Hawks clipped three hours 52 minutes 11 seconds off the 18 hours 42 minutes 54 seconds record Roscoe Turner made on a one-stop East-West crossing of the country last May 27.

Not Golf, Says Judge. In Ruling On Course

White Plains, N. Y., Aug. 9 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Wisechiff didn't say what it was, but he said it wasn't golf that was being played on the miniature courses that fill the vacant lots of the United States from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

He ruled Thursday that a miniature course proposed for a White Plains residential district didn't come under the provision of the zoning laws which permit a golf course in the section. He made his decision in a test case brought by a real estate company which had been denied permission to erect a club house on a lot where it proposed to install one of the "golf" courses.

Four Children Seen As Kidnapping Victims

Berkley, Calif., Aug. 9 (AP).—Four children were missing from their homes here Thursday in what police said may be the result of a kidnapping plot.

The children were last seen playing in front of their Sixth street home Wednesday afternoon. Wednesday night a man telephoned the parents and said:

"Your children are safe. Don't worry. Wait."

The children are Priscilla Morrill, 8; her brother, Howard, 10, and Edward, 10, and Harry Watt, 12.

Woman Hires Cab To Commit Suicide

New York, Aug. 9 (AP).—An unidentified woman about 25 hailed a cab Wednesday, had herself driven to the Hudson river and jumped in. Her body was recovered several hours later by police.

The taxi driver said she handed him a card on which, as well as he could remember, was written "7613 Landview avenue, Cleveland, Mr. Bert A. Robinson," but she took the card back.

WILCOX NAMES FOUR SUSPECTS

Says Police Know Motive For Slaying Of Jerry Buckley.

Detroit, Aug. 9 (AP).—Definite progress in the search for the slayers of Radio Announcer Jerry Buckley was in prospect Thursday night as Police Commissioner Thomas C. Wilcox revealed the names of four suspects, and the Wayne Circuit bench met to consider a petition for a twenty-three-man grand jury.

En route to Detroit from Kansas, Commissioner Wilcox told a staff correspondent of the Detroit News that Thomas Licavoli, Ted Pizzino and Mike Morgany are sought as the gunmen who killed Buckley, and that Frank Cammarata is wanted as the man who drove the car which carried the slayers away from the scene of the shooting in the La Salle Hotel July 23. He added that the motive for the slaying also is known to the police.

Probe of Case Asked
James E. Chenot, prosecuting attorney, petitioned Judge Lester S. Moll, presiding judge of the Circuit Court, for a grand jury to investigate the Buckley case and other recent slayings. Two hours later five of the eighteen circuit judges who went into conference agreed that their decision shall determine the fate of the petition, despite the absence of thirteen other members of the bench who are on vacation, and promised to make known that decision Saturday.

Ex-Congressman Raises New Alibi

Baltimore, Aug. 9 (AP).—Arrested at a liquor still in St. Mary's county, south of Washington, Manuel Herrick, former Oklahoma congressman, was held Thursday to the federal grand jury under $1,500 bond as officers continued an investigation of his story that he was acting as a prohibition informer. Unable to secure bond, Herrick went to jail for the night.

Herrick, 54, was arrested early Wednesday by federal raiders who told Commissioner Harris N. Abercrombie that they saw the one-term congressman fire the boilers and lift mash into the big still of 1,000 gallons capacity. He told officers he was paid $15 a week.

The still was destroyed and 12,000 gallons of mash and a truck containing fifty cases of fruit jars were confiscated and Herrick and two other men were taken in a truck to Marlboro, where they spent the night, and Thursday were brought to Baltimore. A fourth man at the still escaped.

A THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

By
AMOS R. WELLS
What Do You Think About When Peeling Potatoes?

A COLLEGE girl who spent the summer as a counselor in a girls' camp was also expected to help out in the kitchen. One day she was busy peeling potatoes when the head of the camp came and spoke to her. "It's too bad," she said, "that a young woman of your education should have to peel potatoes." The girl looked up brightly. "But, Miss Baldwin," she said, "I don't have to think about the potatoes while I'm peeling them."

"That was a Pauline utterance. 'Whatsoever things are lovely... think on these things.' Our minds are out, though our fingers may be hired out. And even if our hum-drum tasks require constant attention as we work, there is an upper self that may be living at the same time, and communing with the angels. If we 'set our minds on the things that are above,' the 'things that are upon the earth' will not suffer—but be sure of that—but will be vastly advantaged."

"Whatsoever things are lovely... think on these things."

THE WEARY MOTHER

The weary mother sat her down
And slowly sewed the buttons on.
Oh, there were dances in the town
That night to which she might have gone,
And there was music sweet to hear,
And there were books she might have read.
But for a small boy sleeping near
She chose at home to sew instead.

And then she washed his little blouse
And nicely pressed it for the morn.
The next door neighbor left her house,
Her head held high, as if in scorn.
As if to say: "I go to dine
Where all is brilliantly gay.
Where silverware and glassware
shine,
While busy at your tasks you stay."

The weary mother dressed her child
And proudly watched him walk the street.
Upon his way to school and smiled
To see him look so trim and neat.
Her face was bright with happiness
The next door neighbor couldn't know.
She had no little girl to dress,
No little boy for whom to sew.

Not much of dances long remains.
Though music sweet is good to hear,
Time quickly ends the lovely strains.
The cares it soothes will reappear.
But toil for little girls and boys
Rewards the long and tedious night.

And weary mothers find their joys
In garments trim and blouses white.

Little Jack Rabbit

By David Cory

HUNGRY HAWK

"Come on out," cried Hungry Hawk, as he tapped on the old hollow stump, into which you remember your frightened little bunny had escaped in the last story. "I just flew down from the blue sky to pass the time of day."

"I don't believe a word you say," answered the breathless little bunny, "and I'm not coming out while you're around."

"Dear, dear! Although safe enough so long as he stayed where he was, the little rabbit feared that the old robber bird would hang around for a long time."

As Hungry Hawk preened his feathers, yet always keeping an eye on the old stump, who should come along but Danny Fox.

"Hello, Hungry Hawk, what are you doing?"

"Howdy, Danny Fox, what are you doing?"

"Oh, just taking a walk," answered the old fox, squinting through a crack in the old hollow tree. "I smell rabbit."

"Well, that's as far as your old nose will go," chuckled Hungry Hawk. "Pretty soon I'm going to pull that little rabbit out and eat him."

"You'll never get him out unless I help you," grinned Danny Fox, although mad as a hornet at the rude words of the old Hawk.

"How's that?"

"Because," went on Danny Fox, with a bigger grin than ever. "I'll first eat Hawk and Rabbit later," and he made a sudden leap at the old bird, catching him by the tail.

My goodness, how the fur and feathers flew! It certainly was some fight. At first Danny Fox was on top. Pretty soon Hungry Hawk squirmed from under and dug his sharp claws into the old fox's fur overcoat. But Danny Fox still held on to the old bird's tail.

"Suppose we stop and talk it over," at length gasped the old Hawk. So they let go of each other and sat down to rest. Hungry Hawk was all muddled up and Danny Fox's hair

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE FISHERMAN

By Mary Graham Bonner

Peggy knew that the Little Black Clock had turned the time back, and John knew it too.

There was something so simple about the scene they were watching. It was true enough that they had seen men fishing before this, and in their own time too, but there was an old-time look about the place and the man sitting by the water, quietly, happily fishing.

But there was something about his appearance and his ways that made them feel that he was more interested in fishing than any one they had ever seen.

They watched him for quite awhile, and then the Little Black Clock said:

"I turned the time back to the early part of the seventeenth century."

"We've just seen one of the most famous fishermen who ever lived."

"What was his name?" the children exclaimed.

"Lazak Walton," said the Little Black Clock. "and we've been seeing him as he quietly celebrated one of his birthdays. He was born on August 9, 1593."

"He went from his home to London and was a shop-keeper for awhile, but he always loved fishing better than anything in the world."

"He wrote a famous book on fishing, and all who love fishing know his name."

"I thought it would be nice, on his birthday, to see him at his dearly beloved fishing."

"He did look so happy," Peggy said.

"I guess he'll have one of those fishes he caught for his birthday supper," John added.

Monday—"In Clover."

The Calf Ribs Widow, upon hearing that a nice looking young face power agent was headed in the direction of her house Thursday, cooked a big dinner, and entertained him in fine fashion; and the mean thing wouldn't tell her he was married until he got ready to leave.

Atlas Peck quit chewing and smoking about two months ago, in order to cut down living expenses, but he can't see where he is any better off, as he hasn't saved either tobacco or matches by it.

Ellick Helwanger says as soon as the cost of living goes down he believes he will try it.

seemed to have been combed the wrong way!

"I'll help you catch the little rabbit if you'll agree to let me help eat him," grinned Danny Fox.

"All right," agreed the old Hawk, "but how shall we get him out of the tree?"

"I'll smoke him out," chuckled Danny Fox. "You wait here while I trot home for my pipe. I'll puff tobacco smoke into that hollow tree till he either hops out or chokes to death."

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEWS ADAMS

BITING THE BIT

ALL of us need some sort of a prod to keep us from looking down too much, or from side-stepping real tasks ahead of us that should be performed by us alone.

I have always looked upon the bit in a horse's mouth as a mild form of cruelty, and yet I have admired that animal when it seemed to say to itself that it would take that bit in its teeth and do the job of its master anyway.

The story is told of Stevenson that when he began his "Kidnapped," he had no idea it would turn out the way it did. He says, himself, that his characters "took the bit in their teeth," and went through with the story in their own way. "I began it," says Stevenson, "partly as a lark, partly as a pot-boiler, and suddenly it moved, David and Alan stepped out from the canvas, and I found I was in another world!"

And we, who have read "Kidnapped," found that we were in another world, too, as we read it.

Probably we would never have heard of Newton, and he would never have been the "Sir Isaac" so familiar to us, had he not one day been taking a nap, and a tired apple-fallen upon him—to make him think. The story is, that then and there he evolved his theory of gravitation. I can imagine him lying out there in the shade saying to himself: "I'll master this mystery!"

We need something, every once in a while, to jar us, to wake us up, to make us bite the bit and determine to do something unusual and useful. When a man is "floored," he does ten times the thinking he does when he is on his feet. It isn't natural for him to be down there, and so he takes command of himself in a way he would not were all things running smoothly and happily.

I have always liked to have people tell me I couldn't do a certain thing that I have thought about doing. That makes me do it! Or else wrench something in the attempt!

People never know the limits of their abilities until they have had grand tests made. This biting of the bit is a glorious idea for us all.

Alexandria To Sprinkle Clouds With Rain Powder

Washington, Aug. 9.—The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce is so exercised over the prolonged absence of rain in the surrounding farm areas that at the instance of Dan S. Hollenga, executive secretary, it is about to sponsor an attempt to make rain by sprinkling chemicals on the clouds from an airplane.

Mr. Hollenga heard of the "rain powder," which is to figure in this effort to circumvent the forces of nature, as a result of the recent appeal of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce that Governor Pollard of Virginia lead the state in prayers for rain.

Heard Appeal

S. B. Romero, of Santa Fe, in dry New Mexico, read about this appeal in news dispatches, and wrote to Mr. Hollenga telling him about the perfection of a special "rain powder," and holding out rosy promises if a sufficient quantity of this chemical is sprinkled on the clouds.

Mr. Hollenga immediately ordered 200 pounds of the powder and arranged with a pilot to scatter it in the air. The shipment is now on its way to Alexandria from Santa Fe. It was expected to arrive not later than today.

CHART SHOWS WHEAT AS FOOD

Instructs Farmers When Grain Is Cheaper Than Corn.

By Frank L. Weller

Washington (AP)—With the prospect of low prices forcing some 200,000,000 bushels of wheat into livestock feed, department of agriculture economists have prepared a chart to show the farmers when it is cheaper to feed wheat than corn.

The chart shows the ordinary price range of each grain, and at any market quotation it is possible to determine the relative economy of feeding corn or wheat.

When corn is worth 30 cents and wheat 33, for example, wheat is the more economical feed for all livestock. When corn is worth 61 cents and wheat 70, corn is the more economical.

Wheat Cheaper

However, when corn is worth 33 cents and wheat 33, it is cheaper to feed wheat to hogs and beef cattle and corn to sheep and poultry.

In some corn belt localities wheat has been selling lower than corn.

For hogs, a bushel of wheat when ground seems to have a feeding value from 10 to 20 percent greater than a bushel of corn. It is almost as necessary to supplement it with feeds as it is to supplement corn.

The cost of grinding always is figured into the price at which wheat is the cheaper feed. Wheat must be ground for best results and since costs vary it is largely a matter for the individual farmer to determine when ground wheat is available to him at a price sufficiently below corn.

Poultry Feed

With wheat at its present price, it is considered a desirable feed for poultry, both as a whole grain in scratch mixtures and in ground form mixed with mash. Fed alone, however, it does not give the best results, but should be mixed with corn.

Wheat also may take the place of corn in the ration for dairy cows.

It is figured that a bushel of wheat is about equal in feeding value to a bushel of corn. In cases where the farm value of corn is only slightly less than that of wheat and where the farmer has surplus wheat but does not have corn, it might pay him to feed wheat and save hauling charges.

Grind Wheat

When fed to horses wheat should be ground or, preferably, rolled, and must be mixed with other feeds because of its sticky qualities which are brought about in mastication and also because, if fed alone, it may cause digestive troubles.

Five percent less grain is required when wheat is fed to hogs, and when corn is 70 cents a bushel and wheat 79, grains can be made

TAKES JOB AS COLLEGE HEAD

Leaves Banking Firms To Take Post At U. Of P.

Philadelphia (AP)—Thomas S. Gates is "grateful" for the chance to resign a partnership in four of the world's greatest banking houses for a job without salary—and sees nothing extraordinary in his action. Gates resigned as partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., New York; Drexel & Co., Philadelphia; Morgan, Grenfell & Co., London; and Morgan & Cie, Paris, to be president of the University of Pennsylvania.

Life Interest

"A man sincerely interested in any field of activity," says Gates, a man of considerable wealth, "usually develops a constantly increasing desire to devote more and more time to that particular field."

"If he is offered the opportunity to gratify that desire, and he is in a position to take advantage of the opportunity, it is only natural that he should do so."

"The opportunity to do this was presented when the trustees honored me by electing me president of the university and I saw no reason why I should not gratefully accept that opportunity."

"Probably because I have devoted many years to work in the financial field there seems to be an impression that I shall be concerned chiefly with the university's financial and administrative affairs. Such is not the case."

Prime Object

"I do not believe it is possible for a man to do effective work in the interest of a university if he loses sight of the primary object for which the institution exists, or if he fails to maintain a thoroughly active interest in every phase of its activity."

"Funds are needed in the conduct of a university just as they are needed for the maintenance of all other institutions, and to see that those funds are obtained, and wisely administered is essential."

"But the fact remains that the principal object of a university is to provide higher education and as a matter of plain common sense I fail to see how I, or any other man, could hope to function efficiently as head of a university without being constantly and thoroughly concerned with its academic work."

AMUSEMENTS

At the Majestic

Love dominates the story of "Young Man of Manhattan," the red-blooded, mile-a-minute, modern-day romance which plays Monday and Tuesday at the Majestic theatre. It's the story of two people who want to live their own lives after marriage and have love too. Katharine Brush, popular magazine writer, created "Young Man of Manhattan" as a Saturday Evening Post serial. Then the story was published in novel form and ran into several editions.

Claudette Colbert, the charming heroine of "The Lady Lies," plays the part of Ann Vaughn, who "only rode in strange men's laps on third Mondays in May. Her eyes are dark, her hair is brown. She has a straight, short little nose, a model chin, pointed yet soft, and dark lashes."

TEXAS GUARDS POTATOES

Austin, Tex. (AP)—With the Irish potato industry growing rapidly in Texas, producers are concentrating on plans to keep potato plant diseases and pests out of the state. Producers are considering the advisability of a quarantine against importation of uncertified seed.

Tom Heeney's handlers claim that he was unable to finish his fight with Tuffy Griffiths because rubbing alcohol got in his eye in the rest period before the final round.
